ESTHER HILL

Dean of teaching and learning

ALL SAINTS' COLLEGE, PERTH

Esther Hill is the passionate promoter and director of the Beyond Boundaries Institute at All Saints' College. A future-focused hub, the Institute has developed student-run Propeller Industries, operated from a 'hangar' on the college grounds, which includes a pop-up shop selling goods students have made on-site and enterprises where they redistribute other goods.

The second stage of the college's Creative Industries program is where students work with service partners such as disabled surfing, aged care, dementia charities, Anglicare for the homeless, and Teach Learn Grow for Indigenous work and projects in India. Organisations pitch their problems to the students, who then have the opportunity to solve real-world issues.

STEPHEN ROBERTS

Director of art

ALL SAINTS' COLLEGE, PERTH

As director of art at Perth's All Saints' College, Stephen Roberts brings artists from all genres into the school environment and then invites the college community and other schools to collaborate. As a result, All Saints' has become a conduit that links the arts industry with students and the wider community; visual artists, theatre groups, orchestras and filmmakers are all invited to work with the students.

Roberts' goal is to empower students, who then become 'experts' to grow in their own schools. The students can talk first-hand about their experiences of working on authentic projects, and media and film students work to create a documentary about the experience. This takes the art experience out of a predetermined course and into a more fluid space.

TIM RUSSELL

Dean of student wellbeing

ALL SAINTS' COLLEGE, PERTH

Tim Russell strategically planned and implemented the Heads, Hearts and Hands service learning program at All Saints' College. He has creatively embedded ethics and justice into the curriculum from pre-kindergarten to Year 12 and has expanded the college's outreach program and collaborated with its Creative Industries unit to have service providers, such as the Salvation Army, disabled surfers and Disability Services, meet with the Creative Industries class to share real-world problems. The students then employ their design thinking skills to come up with and pitch solutions to the providers.

Additionally, Russell has actively engaged the alumni and families in the college's outreach program so that the entire community is now actively involved in the Heads, Hearts and Hands approach to making a difference in the wider community. In total, Russell has developed 40 service programs for the college. 📍
