ALL Saints' College has launched four programs to support the community during the coronavirus pandemic.

The programs include supporting families, the homeless or the elderly doing it tough and the community is asked to help.

Head of the school's Catalyst: Centre for Service and Social Enterprise, Scott Corbett, said they were blessed to have a very generous and supportive community.

"We have had lots of expressions of interest in, and support for, these four new community programs," he said. "It is wonderful to be a part of a college community that is truly committed to our vision of 'making a positive difference in our world'."

Mr Corbett said some parents had lost their jobs or had to close their businesses during the pandemic.

"The college recognises each family's circumstances are unique and so has been working closely with each family affected so that no student's place at the college is jeopardised," he said.

The programs are:

Adopt a Friend:

Connecting with residents from Amana Living and the Royal Australian Air Force Association (RAAFA) Memorial Estate

Food Friendly:

Community cooking program for the homeless to now be done in people's homes.

Help Each Other: People are asked to donate non-perishable items.

PRATYeK: Community members are asked to donate basic essentials to support people in India.
